Table of Contents

Abstract 7

1 Introduction 9

2 Automation in online dispute resolution 13
  2.1 History and features of ODR platforms 14
  2.2 Future developments 16
  2.3 Conclusion 18

3 Digitization in State courts 19
  3.1 The British Columbia (Canada) Experience 19
  3.2 E-Justice and Innovation in the EU Context 20
  3.3 Conclusion 21

4 Perspectives from computer science 23
  4.1 Jurisprudential challenges 24
  4.2 Technical challenges 26
  4.3 Political challenges 26

5 Perspectives from the social sciences 29
  5.1 The human factor in automation 30
  5.2 The relevance of procedural fairness 31

6 Experiences in (US) administrative law 35

7 European Consumer Sales Law (ECSL) 37
  7.1 The legislative basis for ECSL 37
  7.2 Modes of regulation in ECSL: from rules to circumstances 38
  7.3 Enforcement of ECSL 40
  7.4 ODR in Europe 42

8 Automation in dispute resolution and the effective application of ECSL 47
  8.1 Are legal expert systems fit to assess ECSL? 48
  8.2 Concerns over neutrality and transparency 48
  8.3 Concerns with respect to judicial and regulatory oversight 49
  8.4 Is automated dispute resolution a threat to effective judicial protection? 50

9 From trusting institutions to understanding decisions 51